The Week That Was: Global News In Review

Ecuador President Daniel Noboa has been declared winner of the country's presidential election, over Luisa González, a protégé of Ecuador's left-wing former President Rafael Correa. Gonzalez offered an alternative model for security based on what her party described as "prevention, violence reduction and coexistence". Noboa narrowly beat Ms. González in the first round in February but did not reach the 50 percent threshold required to avoid a second round. Polls show Sunday's election as a standoff. In the past five years, Ecuador has experienced an explosion in violence linked to drug trafficking.

Battle for Rare Earth Minerals

Where there’s oil, there’s the United States of America. It’s an old joke, fostered by a century of U.S.- backed coups and military interventions in the name of cheap access to oil reserves. But the age of oil politics may be giving way to a new age of mineral politics.

Strategies for the Democrats for the Democrats to Push Back

Since last year’s election, in which Republicans gained control of all three branches of government, the Democrats have seemed somewhat lost and unable to develop a pushback strategy to counter the new administrations policies. The Op Ed team at USRESIST NEWS has the following suggestions to help the Democratic party get its act together.

A Court's Options To Enforce Compliance With Court Orders

Under Rule 3.3 of the American Bar Association's Model Rules of Professional Conduct, titled "Candor Toward the Tribunal," a lawyer has a number of duties when dealing with a court of law. Rule 3.3(a)(1) states "A lawyer shall not knowingly make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer. Additionally, Rule 3.3(a)(3) provides "A lawyer shall not knowingly offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. While these are model rules, each state has a version of these rules, including the section on "Candor Toward the Tribunal," that all lawyers must abide by when dealing with a tribunal or court.
